

Does the “voetstoots” clause cover latent defects that the seller was aware of?

No. The “voetstoots” clause only covers those that he was not aware of. If the purchaser can therefore prove that the seller was indeed aware of the latent defects, for example a leaking roof or a crack in the wall, he can still claim compensation in respect thereof.