

Is there a duty on children to maintain their parents?

Yes. The duty to maintain is reciprocal and parents could sue their children for maintenance should they be able to prove to the court that they don't have the means to look after themselves, whilst their children do. The same applies to grandparents and further.